CANNON'S JOKE ON JUDGE PARKER

Campaign Anecdote Told by Uncle Joe.

INCIDENT OF HIS BOYHOOD DAYS

A Reminiscence Recalled by the Speaker of the House at Oyster Bay Involving Ephraim, an Old Colored Man, an Ape and the Democratic Nominee For President.

The speeches notifying President Roosevelt of his nomination by the Republican party to succeed himself in the White House had been made, and Uncle Joe Cannon and the president, standing in the angle of the veranda at Oyster Bay, were devouring chicken croquettes and lobster salad, says the Philadelphia North American.

The speeches and the general situation were the subjects under discussion.

"That reminds me of a story," broke in Uncle Joe.

"I was a lad of about six years, living near Rockville, Ind. Van Amringe's circus was billed to show in the town. We had an old colored man on the place named Ephraim.

"From the moment the circus bills were put up Eph was no good for work. That circus was the only thing he thought about. The price of admission was 'two bits' for adults—that is, 25 cents; a 'levy' for a child—that is, 12½ cents. I had a 'two bit' piece and a 'levy,' and I also had a 'sick flip'—that is, 6¼ cents.

"I was as crazy to go to the circus as Eph was, and, having all this wealth, we concluded to go together. The 'two bits' would pay Eph's way, the 'levy' would pay mine, and the 'sick flip' we determined we could use to buy a hunk of ginger cake.

"We started early in the morning. Eph getting us a breakfast of some bacon before we started. We had to walk several miles into Rockville, and when I got tired Eph would 'tote' me on his back.

"We got to Rockville about noon, got our tickets and went to the menagerie. Wandering around, we came across a cage that had an ape in it. It was the largest ape I had ever seen, and I tell you what's a fact, I have never seen anything like it since. It was as big as a man, and covered with hair, did not look unlike Eph.

"We watched it for a long time and then we went around among the other cages, but invariably we came back to that cage with the ape in it.

"Finally, when we had got back there for about the sixth time, Eph stood looking at the ape for a long while and then said:

"'What's yo' name?'"

"The ape paid no attention to Eph's question, and he repeated it:

"'What's yo' name?'"

"This time the ape shook his head as though he refused to answer. Pointing his finger at the ape, old Eph said:

"'Dat's right, old man; don't yo' say nothin', fer jist as shuah as yo' do de white man will have yo' hocks' cotton in two shakes ob de lamb's tail.'"

"I think that about his Parker," added Uncle Joe, as the president laughed a loud guffaw. "If once he says anything, I think the Republicans will have him working mighty hard in a very few minutes telling how he came to vote twice for Bryan and then to turn around and send that gold telegram to the St. Louis convention."

And the president, with glee, pounded Uncle Joe on the shoulders, while all about laughed.

A Result of Automobileing.

"Chauffeurs' wrist," like "housemaid's knee," threatens to become one of the penalties of civilization. The disease may arise, says the British Medical Journal, from the hand being jerked by a premature explosion when the car is being started.
